PAUL MCAULEY APPOINTED REGIONAL CHIEF INFORMATION OFFICER

Paul McAuley, currently the director of information management at the Kingston General Hospital, was appointed Regional Chief Information Officer after a competitive nation-wide search. He will also serve as the e-Health Lead for the South East Local Health Integration Network (South East LHIN). He will begin his new role early in the new year.

A chemical engineer with two advanced degrees (applied science and business administration); Paul has been at the Kingston General Hospital for over seven years in various capacities. Prior to that, he also worked for Corrections Canada.

“We are very pleased to have Paul as our Regional CIO,” said Bruce Laughton, chair of the HCNSEO’s chief executive officer’s committee. “He has provided the hospitals in the region with significant strategic and operational leadership and in this new position his skills will be extended to other health care partners in the South East.”

“Paul is well respected by many information management leaders across Ontario and we are confident that he will represent the South East at important provincial strategic and operational decision-making meetings,” said Paul Huras, South East LHIN chief executive officer.

“I am looking forward to helping create a secure and comprehensive information management system that can help health care providers improve the quality of care for their patients,” said Mr. McAuley.

Please join us in welcoming Paul McAuley to this new, challenging opportunity.

Established in 1993, the Health Care Network of Southeastern Ontario is a voluntary partnership of health service organizations – hospitals, community care access centres, public health units and Queen’s Faculty of Health Sciences - in Southeastern Ontario working together to improve the delivery of health services in the region.
